

ANNOUNCING OPEN AUDITIONS

for a summer production of David Ives' New Jerusalem

Directed by Dianne O'Neill

Sunday, March 29th from 7:00-9:00

Baruch de Spinoza is a young merchant and the heir apparent of Saul Mortera, the chief Rabbi of Amsterdam. When the city accuses Spinoza of atheism, he is summoned to the synagogue to defend himself. Spinoza's best friend, his sister, and the woman he loves are all drawn into the controversy, a historical event that shook up not only the entire Jewish community of Amsterdam, but changed Spinoza's and Mortera's lives—and all of Western thought—irrevocably. The play is a re-imagining of the interrogation and eventual excommunication of the young philosopher on July 27, 1656. In this eloquent and masterful drama, David Ives attempts to open the temple doors and let us listen in on a dispute whose philosophical and political echoes still reverberate today.

Character Breakdown – All ages are guidelines; roles are open to all ethnicities and gender identities.

Abraham Van Valkenburgh: A regent of Amsterdam. In his forties. Dignified and obdurate.
